

"Thou wert my guide,
philosopher and friend."
Pope

To one who has been an influence in my life; one who has inspired me to do things that may live; one who has been a benign inspiration and who has made me look up and onward I dedicate what I have written here.

To

Mrs. IDA SMITH AUSTIN

of Virginia I humbly consecrate the words I have written and from the depths of my heart I want to tell her how much I appreciate the days we spent together—

OBJECT DESCRIPTION

A black and white photocopy of a loose-leaf book placed in a binder. On the left-hind-side corner is a staple connecting a secondary page. The image appears to be a dedication page with an introduction quote written by a Pope, reading, " Thou wert my guide, philosopher and friend." -Pope. To the right of the quote is black scribble or a signature written in black ink. Underneath the quote are two paragraphs that read, "To one who has been an influences in my life: one who has inspired me to do things that may live; one who has been a benign inspiration and who made me look up and onward I dedicate what I have written here. To Mrs. Ida Smith Austin of Virginia I humbly consecrated the words I have written and from the depths of my hear I want to tell her how much I appreciate the days we spent together-"
