

2.

"Our knees are bent , our eyes dimmed with tears and our hearts broken in a thousand pieces. We have become walking skeletons due to starvation. Our happy home life of the past remains a faint recollection. To be sure we mourn for our dear dead, but we know indeed that their sacrifices are indispensable. It was with blood and tears that our ancestors watered the tree of liberty and we must do likewise.

"However, we make this solemn promise to you: whatever may be in store for us, no matter to what indignities we may be subjected,we promise you that we shall never compromise with the foe,.....

"Free women of America, in return we want you to promise us that you will strike against the enemy with all your power and that you shall accept no adjustments which do not guarantee peace forever and justice to all.

"Make us the promise that when the hour of Victory shall ring that you, women of America, will take the lead in demanding a new world Free from symmetrical form and a new order based on personal liberty, universal social justice, and everlasting peace.

"And out of this promise we shall derive new courage to spur us on to new sacrifices and steel our hearts against the horrors enacted daily before our eyes. "
