

Greek Government Exhibition Here.

Those Minneapolitans who believe that Greece is "living Greece no more" will be happily disabused if they visit the Greek government exhibition now being shown at the Art Institute. Premier Venizelos, aware of the fact that modern Greece was overshadowed in the popular mind by ancient Greece, has sent to America a brilliant collection of art photographs, together with a collection of art objects. These may be seen in Minneapolis throughout the week.

A tour of the extraordinarily charming pictures shown here represents a panoramic trip through the centuries from the dawn of civilization to the present. Ancient Greece is linked with modern Greece. The impression that Greece died about 2,000 years ago is most effectually dispelled; for here the photographs prove the existence of a contemporary Greece of striking vitality.

Beauty must always be associated with the Greeks. No matter which way one turns; whether it be to the sculpture and architecture of the ancient Greeks—whether it be to their mythology or their literature and philosophy—or whether it be to the pictorial wonders of the Greek islands as they rise precipitately from the Aegean sea today—beauty must always command one's attention. An inspection of the photographs on exhibition now gives one a sense of the continuity of the history of Greece as well as the history of civilization. One can progress unbrokenly from Pericles to Venizelos.

No country can be so well interpreted through pictures as Greece. No country has done so much towards appealing directly to the eye. All those interested in art, history, philosophy or current events will find an interesting hour awaiting them at the Art Institute this week.

OBJECT ID	1999.20.88
OBJECT NAME	Clipping, Newspaper
LANGUAGE	English
DONOR	Mary Economidys
OBJECT ENTITIES	Economidys, Mary (collected by) Economidou, Maria (subject)
RELATED ITEMS	Book, Address, 1999.20.1 Newspaper, 1999.20.2 Newspaper, 1999.20.3 Newspaper, 1999.20.4
ACCESS POINTS	Newspapers

OBJECT DESCRIPTION

An old newspaper clipping of an article typed with black ink, which has been collaged onto a page with other clippings to create a book. The article is titled "Greek Government Exhibition Here" and is broken into four paragraphs.

CITATION

Clipping, Newspaper, National Hellenic Museum, https://collections.nationalhellenicmuseum.org/Detail/objects/. Accessed 11/10/26.