OBJECT DESCRIPTION

Black and white photograph of brick byzantine church with characteristic onion dome topped with a cross. The church dominates the photograph taking up a good three quarters of the photo. The picture was taken across the street from the southwest corner so that the viewer sees mostly the south side of the church and the front entrance on the left to the west. The entrance is adorned with a white portico with a triangular top supported by six columns. There is a cross mounted on the peak of the portico. All of the windows have stained glass and are narrow and arched. There is a black wrought iron fence surrounding the property. The grounds are landscaped with grass and small bushes with one large conical shaped evergreen near the entrance. In the lower right-hand corner of the photograph, there is a large black 4-door ~1930's car.
