OBJECT DESCRIPTION

ORIGIN

This photograph was donated by James and Dr. Constantine Tatooles. It is a wedding portrait that depicts their grandfather and grandmother (James John Tatooles and Olga Tatooles). They were married in 1890 in Kastri in the province of Tripoli, Greece. Their grandfather (James Tatooles) came to the US in 1888 and brought the rest of his family in 1906. He worked for the railroad first and was given land by them. He set up a restaurant at 26th and State. The first floor had a restaurant, the second floor is where he lived, the third floor was a dormatory for other immigrants, mostly from the same village. The building was owned by Marshall Fields. His nickname was "Big Jim" because he was 6'4" and was a leader in the community.
