OBJECT DESCRIPTION

This is a small black and white photograph of a Gus (Constantine) Rassogianis and his wife Anna and two children, John and Pauline. There is a black bar along the bottom of the picture. The boy is wearing a jacket with plaid sleeves and a white shirt with a large collar. The girl is wearing a white blouse with a black skirt and suspenders. The woman is wearing a black jacket with a white blouse, while the man is wearing a grey suit with a white shirt and a dark striped tie.

On the back of the picture is written, in pen, the number twelve.

ORIGIN

Paulina Franks' grandfather, John Rassogianis, came to Chicago in the 1890s. He began his life in the new city by peddling fruits and later, with the help of his sons Alex and George, would open a candy store. In the 1920s Paulina Franks' father Constantine became a part of the family business and the store was able to prosper. When the second business closed Paulina Rassogianis chose to hold as many of the candy store's items as possible and, later, donate them to the National Hellenic Museum.

The Rassogianis family began their candy business in Chicago proper, working out of their own shop named "St. Louis Ice Cream Parlor." Eventually, the shop was closed and the Rassogianis' chose to continue their candy store venture in Berwyn, Illinois. The new shop they chose to open was named Alex's Sweet Shop.

Paulina Franks' father was a key contributor to the success of the Rassogianis candy stores. While Constantine Rassogianis was a noteworthy entrepreneur, he also had many other accomplishments. Among these was his four years of involvement in the Greek national military during World War I wherein he obtained the rank of sergeant. Also, he was a published author and poet, an experienced mandolin player, a church officer and had extensive knowledge of psalti.
