

OBJECT ID	2003.27.3
OBJECT NAME	Veil, Chalice
MATERIAL	Velvet
OBJECT ENTITIES	Greek Orthodox Church, St. (collected by) Greek Orthodox Church, St. (owned by) Demetrios, St (is related to) Greek Orthodox Church, St. (is related to)

ACCESS POINTS

bread ceremonial cover cross eucharist host jeel paten religious rickrack
Saint Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church
Sequins
St. Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church
St Demetrios
Veil
Velvet

OBJECT DESCRIPTION

Cross-shaped red velvet paten cover with cross design in the center. The cross is built up as the focal point by the base which is a raised, gold embroidered cross which is largely obscured by decoration. At the very center is a bright red (fake) jewel from which tendrils of metallic gold thread emanate. Each of these tendrils ends in pale metallic sequin which has been sewn onto the embroidered cross. This gold embroidery is echoed in the decoration of leaves and buds that are found in each of the four arms. The interior of the entire cross is decorated with a border of thin gold rickrack and then an outer border of gold fringe. The back is lined with a silky, lighter red fabric. Supports to keep the arms flat are found at the center and behind the embroidery of the arms.

ORIGIN

During the ceremony of the Eucharist the paten veil is used to keep insects or anything that would pollute the sanctity of the host out. In the western orthodox church there are three veils for the ceremony: the chalice veil, the paten veil, and one to cover both (aer). The veil usually corresponds to the color and material of the priest's vestments. Saint Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church was founded in 1927 at its current location on Winona Street, on the north side of Chicago. Demetrios was sainted for his faith in the face of Roman persecution. He used his position as a public figure to convert many Greeks in Thessaly and was openly defiant to the Emperor.

CITATION

Veil, Chalice, National Hellenic Museum, <https://collections.nationalhellenicmuseum.org/Detail/objects/>. Accessed 12/04/20.