OBJECT DESCRIPTION

A woven bag with yellow, green, orange, white, and black striped pattern. The bag has fringe at the bottom, white edging, and a shoulder strap. The bag is mostly yellow, with black as the base color for the weave. Two stripes are green in the middle with four orange dots that form a diamond, as well as orange stripes on either side of the green stripes. In the middle, there is a black stripe with a Greek Key design on it in white. This has a white stripe to either side, with an orange stripe outside. The bottom has a yellow fringe with some green and a white and black fringe in the middle. The inside of the bag is lined with green fabric.

ORIGIN

Tagaris are traditional bags that are usually made of a single piece of woven material, which is then folded and sewn together. They can be used as purses.
