OBJECT DESCRIPTION

A multi-colored wool shag rug. The backing/base of the rug is red, while the center of the carpet is a large rectangle of red shag. Around this is a rectangle of yellow shag, followed by a black rectangle, and then a pink rectangle around the edge of the rug. The shag is somewhat matted and crusty, and there are tears in the fabric.

ORIGIN

This blanket, along with the other textiles in the donation, was presented to Frank N. Frangos in 1949 in Kontreva in appreciation of his support of the village. Kontreva is a village near Tripoli, Arcadia, in the Peloponnese region. Frank was born in 1908 and immigrated to the United States in 1922. This type of rug is known as a flokati, a type of shag rug made in the Pindus mountains of northern Greece.
