OBJECT DESCRIPTION

Tsarouxia (leather shoes) infant size. Brownigh-red with green and tan stitching along the foot opening. Wool pom-pom on the toe of each shoe (blue, green, tan, yellow). Brown interior. The back of the school has a black patch.

ORIGIN

These types of shoes are traditional Greek footwear. They were commonly worn up until Greek independence in the 19th century, after which they were only worn in rural areas due to the westernization of cities. They are also a part of the dress uniform for the Evzone. The pom pom was originally placed on the end of the shoes to make it waterproof.
