

OBJECT ID	2007.1.1
OBJECT NAME	Dish, Ice Cream
DATE CREATED	1900s
MATERIAL	Glass
OBJECT ENTITIES	SANGALIS, THEADORE (owned by) SANGALIS, THEADORE (is related to) Sangalis, Diana (is related to)
RELATED ITEMS	Dish, Ice Cream, 2007.1.2 Dish, Ice Cream, 2007.1.3 Dish, Ice Cream, 2007.1.4 Dish, Ice Cream, 2007.1.5 Spoon, Ice Cream, 2007.1.6.1 Spoon, Ice Cream, 2007.1.6.2 Spoon, Ice Cream, 2007.1.6.3 Spoon, Ice Cream, 2007.1.6.4 Spoon, Ice Cream, 2007.1.6.5 Spoon, Ice Cream, 2007.1.6.6 Bowl, Serving, 2007.1.7

ACCESS POINTS

Bowls (Tableware)
Social spoons
Tableware

OBJECT DESCRIPTION

A glass ice cream sundae dish that resembles a lotus flower on top. The dish is held by a thick glass stem that rests on a wide base.

ORIGIN

Ice cream and its various forms (gelato, frozen custard, frozen yogurt, sorbet) have been among the favorite desserts of American and Greek culture. Ice cream is said to have been invented in the Persian empire around 400 BC when snow, saved in a yakhchal (ice house) to be kept cool until summer, would be flavored and served. This recipe evolved throughout the ages, being created with different means and ingredients. During special gatherings such serving bowls as these may be used to serve ice cream.

CITATION

Dish, Ice Cream, 1900s, National Hellenic Museum, <https://collections.nationalhellenicmuseum.org/Detail/objects/>. Accessed 05/05/26.
