ACCESS POINTS	Replica; Plaque; Entertainment; Cephalus

OBJECT DESCRIPTION

A plaque illustrating Cephalus, the hunter who accidently killed his wife. The plaque is highlighted in green to suggest copper oxidization and aging, but this piece is a replica. On the back is a short description of the image and has a short leather strap meant probably for hanging.

ORIGIN

Theresa Sam Tzakis donated a number of items including a small record collection. While the records are not included in the catalogue, they are accompanied by various other items (almost all of which were replicas).
