OBJECT DESCRIPTION

A hand-woven pink curtain made of wool. It is a bright pink curtain with black and white lines, are about an inch wide, throughout middle. On one end there are crocheted flowers in black, tan, dark blue, yellow, and a dull pink color off of the curtain. A few inches above the flowers there is a white section that has blue and pink flowers and green and brown stems. On the other end of the curtain there is the same pattern but the flowers are not hanging off the edge and the fabric on the one end makes a loop for a curtain rod. There are some pins in the curtain.

ORIGIN

Hand-made by the great greek grandmother of the Pantos in Greece. Would have been made using local wool and a loom.

Item is unique because it is a vibrant pink tapestry, something that is not normally created by Greeks.
